Essential & Visual Studio Code is one of the largest and most popular open source editor suites. Since version 1, Essential is powered by a hosted Git version control system. Its biggest selling point is that it provides a streamlined work environment for developers. Its most powerful feature is its extension system. Essential's extensions are compiled into an extension registry, which allows you to install any number of extensions from over 120 different extensions on a variety of services. Some of the more popular extension services include: F-Droid, Open Hub, and GitHub. The Essentail website describes all the extensions you can find on its site. The extensions themselves are implemented using Electron, an open-source framework. This means you'll be using a web browser to launch the applications. That said, by using Electron, it's possible to make sure all the programs you download and install are safe and secure. Visual Studio Code Visual Studio Code is a well-known open source text editor intended for developers. It offers various ways to give feedback to the community, such as blogs, issues, and GitHub. It supports many programming languages, such as C#, Java, Python, and more, including TypeScript. It is also free to download and use for open source projects. Other features As with other Microsoft products, Visual Studio Code hosts a GitHub repository. It provides a way for people to send pull requests. It has a variety of extensions, including Git, Android Studio, and Vim plugins. Essential was also developed by Microsoft, so it is compatible with Windows, macOS, and Linux. This tool is ideal for developers as it handles all the coding involved. It even supports projects compiled using C++. It can also handle many other languages, including Python and Ruby. C++ compilers can be downloaded as standalone executables (for Windows) or from the GNU Compiler Collection (GCC). Essential is compatible with Microsoft Visual Studio 2019. You'll need a 64-bit version of this Windows operating system in order to use

In a briefing on the new coronavirus to the Australian Medical Association, Dr Anne Speckhard, of the International Centre for Infectious Diseases, said authorities were beginning to see more intense transmission as more people were placed in quarantine. Within a week, she said, the system would catch up and there would be a peak in new cases. This would occur as Australia moved into "holiday season" at the end of February. New South Wales, with Sydney at its heart, was holding up particularly well, but the situation in Australia as a whole was deteriorating more quickly. "By the end of next week, we will have exceeded 50,000 cases and around 60,000 cases by the end of this week," she said. "That would be considered a rapid increase."
