The Maths Edition is a full package of maths activity sheets, designed to extend the skills of students aged 7-9. It includes 70 activity sheets over a range of subject areas including geometry, measurement and probability, covering topics from statistics and counting to multiple representations of numbers. Importantly, the activity sheets complement the accompanying text and explanatory notes. Each sheet features a self-assessment question as well as a comprehensive answer key. A number of test sheets are also available, which can be used as end-of-unit tests or carried out by students themselves, to assess their mastery of the subject area. Formation and elimination of pralidoxime (2-PAM) during post-antidotal treatment. A short-term study was conducted in simulated physiological and pathological conditions to quantify the formation and elimination of the widely used antidotal agent 2-PAM as a function of time, pH, temperature and in the presence of blood. 2-PAM was synthesised by reacting 2-hydroxybenzaldehyde with phenyl isocyanate and molybdenum trioxide, purified by repeated chromatography and characterised by ¹H NMR spectroscopy, mass spectrometry and DSC. 2-PAM formed by this route is the major metabolite detected in the urine of exposed monkeys. ¹H NMR spectra indicate that the 2-position of the amino group of 2-PAM is involved in intramolecular hydrogen bonding. During post-antidotal treatment, the formation of 2-PAM was a function of the dose, pH and temperature. In physiological conditions, the distribution half-life of 2-PAM was estimated at about 1 h, whereas in a simulated post-antidotal treatment condition in muscle homogenate, the distribution half-life was 3.7 h. 2-PAM elimination was also a function 3da54e8ca3
